POPULAR ENTHUSIASM.

Without It General Road Improvement Cannot Be Secured, Says Col. J. H. Brigham.

Col. J. H. Brigham, assistant secretary of agriculture at Washington, is not only a giant in size, but he is a big man in practical common sense. In a recent speech at a good roads convention he said some things that everybody ought to read. Among other good things he said:

"I see no reason why the general government should not appropriate a certain sum of money to be expended in this great work. Of course the states, counties and local communities should be expected to cooperate. A little aid from the general government would be a wonderful encouragement to all the people."

"I hear a number of speakers here saying that we must stir up congress. Now I want to impress you with the idea that we must first educate the people. When the people are in favor of national aid in building good roads, congressmen will be in favor of it, and not until then. They are not going ahead of the people."

"When one of these great popular movements gets started, it acquires wonderful momentum. I heard a story of two farmers who stood beside a railroad for the first time. On the track stood an engine with a long train of heavy cars. Said one farmer to the other: 'Jim, she'll never be able to start it. It isn't possible.'

Finally the steam was turned on with much puffing, crackling and grunting, the great train began to move very slowly, then faster and faster, until finally with a whirl of dust and a roar like thunder, it swung out of sight around a distant curve.

Then the farmer, drawing a long breathe, remarked: 'Jim, they'll never be able to stop it.'

So will it be with the good roads movement. Once let it get thoroughly started and nothing will be able to stop it, or stand before it, till its great work is done."

For these empty lives, filled with morbid cravings, this has not proved a safe world. The demand it has made upon woman in the matter of strict purity and chastity of life and temperance and refinement of habit have been far greater than the protection from its contamination which it has afforded her. Who, nine times out of ten, offers the first glass of liquor to the woman who learns to drink? Rarely will it be found to be another woman. Neither has man been at pains to conceal from her his own selfish indulgence of appetite nor to provide an environment which makes her temptation difficult. Truly the time has come when men must face the long ignored question: "Am I my sister's keeper?"

Justice alone requires its answer in the bringing about of social conditions that shall secure to all classes of women the opportunity to live a full, free, true life which will lessen the temptation to evil. One other act of justice is demanded that man himself live up to that standard of purity and abstinence which from time immemorial has been used in the measuring and judging of woman's character—Union Signal.

"Now good digestion waits on appetite, and health on both."

If it doesn't, try Burdock Blood Bitter.
